Course Description

Welcome to the spring semester of the Master of Human Rights Cohort Seminar! The spring semester plan reflects your input (thank you for that!), and adapts to the challenge of pandemic times.

The main emphasis for the spring semester is fostering relationships: among you, with other MHR students and alumni, and with guest speakers from the human rights field. I’ll also hold space to support you as you seek internships, continue on your human rights career path, and navigate your studies.

In these stressful times, less is more. This isn’t meant to be an in-depth substantive course, and it won’t be. I hope it recharges your batteries, and lets you tap into your collective energy and the inspiration of others in the human rights field.

Grades and Participation

This one-credit course is not taken for a letter grade. It is a Satisfactory/Not Satisfactory (S/N) course. Satisfactory participation means actively engaging in classroom activities and discussions, including with guest speakers.

There are no written assignments for the spring semester of this course.

Due to a time conflict with a core course at the end of class, the final 25 minutes of class will involve optional activities and discussions.

Course Materials

There is no required textbook. I will post short readings on Canvas in advance of visits by guest speakers.

Class Format

This course is offered in a blended format. The March 30, April 13, and April 27 sessions will be HyFlex classes, and students will be able to attend either in person or remotely. All other sessions will be remote (synchronously online).

Mental Health and Stress Management

Let’s face it. Graduate school is stressful, and right now is an especially strained time. University services are available to assist you. You can learn more about the broad range of confidential mental health services available on campus via the Student Mental Health website. You can seek support, information, or services from Boynton Health, the Let’s Talk consultation services, the Humphrey Student Services advisors, and those explained under “Mental Health and Stress Management” at this link. You can also check out the U’s "Wellbeing 101: Tips and Strategies to Help You Focus on Wellbeing This Semester.”

Land Acknowledgment

The University of Minnesota Twin Cities is built within the traditional, ancestral, and contemporary lands of Indigenous peoples. It resides on Dakota land ceded in the Treaties of 1837 and 1851. It is important to acknowledge the peoples on whose land we live, learn, and work as we seek to improve and strengthen our relations with tribal nations. We also acknowledge that words are not enough. We must ensure that our institution provides support, resources, and programs that increase access to all aspects of higher education for American Indian students, staff, faculty, and community members.

Set Your Canvas Notification Preferences

This course depends upon your ability to receive communications from your instructor and/or about the class. It's important that you set up your Canvas “notification preferences” to choose how and when you’d like to receive messages via text, email, or both. Find easy-to-follow instructions at “How do I set my Canvas notification preferences as a student?”

We strongly recommend that you opt to receive notification of Announcements, Conversation Messages, and Added to Conversation so that you don’t risk missing important class communication. For assistance, please contact me or help@umn.edu.
